DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakahara et al '281 in view of Higuchi et al '085. Nakahara et al discloses a golf ball with a two-layered core and a cover. The inner and outer core layers are made from a composition comprising a polybutadiene, a co-crosslinking agent, organic peroxide, and a filler (col 2). The inner core layer has diameter from 29 to 36 mm (col 3, line 6) and a center JIS-C hardness from 25 to 70 (col 3, line 20). The outer core layer has a thickness from 0.5 to 5.5 mm (col 3 line 35) and a surface JIS-C hardness from 80 to 95 (col 3, line 40). The surface hardness of the outer core is higher than the center hardness of the inner core by 10 or more (col 3, lines 45-47). The cover is made from a thermoplastic resin/ionomer as base and has a thickness from 0.9 to 2.9 mm (col 4, lines 15-20). The Shore D hardness of the cover is 70 (table 1). Nakahara et al also discloses increasing hardness values from the center core to 5 - 10 mm away from the center (table 1). The values are more than 5 points higher than the center. Nakahara et al does not disclose values 15 mm away from the center. However, since the hardness of the core layer increases from the center to at least 10 mm away it is obvious that the hardness would continue to increase up through 15 mm away from the center. Nakahara does not disclose a combination of an ionomer and elastomer as the cover composition. However, Higuchi '085 teaches a three piece golf ball with a cover made from an ionomer and elastomer (col 5, lines 45-50). One skilled in the art would have modified the invention of Nakahara with the cover of Higuchi to achieve optimal flight characteristics.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-3 have been considered but are most in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
